

Please read and initial ONLY IF you are sending Rivet Bells to be restored:

Breakage: The old rivets must be removed from rivet-style bells so the bells can be reinstalled on a new strap. Bells do sometimes crack or break when we remove the rivets. The ones most likely to fail are bells with pre-existing cracks, holes, or other structural damage; bells with very rusty rivets; or bells with a structurally weak design. We do not offer any guarantee against breakage. We do not provide compensation for broken bells. We do promise that we will take all reasonable and customary care to avoid damage and breakage.

Fasteners: Rivet bells were originally installed on a strap with solid metal rivets (or sometimes screws.) We do not have the tools and equipment to securely and reliably fasten bells onto a strap with solid rivets, so we use solid-brass machine screws instead.
